Treatment for EAB involves a systemic insecticide that is absorbed throughout the tree.

Trunk Injection is the most expensive method from a labor cost perspective.
The label for Tree-Age has 4 different rates from 30 to 130 ml for 10-to-12-inches of DBH (diameter at breast height.) This Guaranteed Price Proposition lists the medium/high rate of 110 ml for a 10-12 inch (DBH) tree.
Treatments should be done annually.

Soil drench will be the least expensive option for treatment of EAB. 2 applications are recommended. One application this fall, and another to follow in the spring.
Treatments should be done annually.

Basal Bark Spray (trunk spray) with Safari Insecticide and Pentra-Bark. Safari has received a special registration from the Illinois Department of Agriculture specifically for the control of EAB in Illinois. The Pentra-Bark surfactant causes the lenticels in the bark to open thus allowing the Safari quicker trans-location into the cambium layer of the tree. The trunk is sprayed from 4 inches above the soil to 60 inches above the soil allowing for a large surface area through which the material can be "absorbed" into the tree. The manufacturer claims this material is at full effectiveness in the outermost leaves within 21 days of the application.
Treatments should be done annually.

Cost per inch for the Basal Bark Spray is $6.00 per inch.
